Food Intolerance Testing / IgG Antibodies

Food allergy testing is used to identify foods that the immune system overreacts to. Food allergy testing can help you remove foods that promote inflammation and help you add foods that are safe to eat. This particular test comes with a personal guide that helps you plan daily meals and snacks so that you can avoid the offending foods and still maintain a great diet. Most IgG food allergies need to be avoided for 6-12 months before attempting to add them back into your diet.

MRT Mediator Release Test for Food Sensitivities (140 Foods & 30 Chemicals/Additives)

The MRT test works by measuring the volume change of white blood cells when they are exposed to different foods. The more the cells "empty", the higher assumed reaction. This is helpful since you don't have to consume the foods and it can still be mostly accurate with those who have immune challenges.

Advanced Neurotransmitter Profile (Mental Health & Moods)

We look for certain levels of neurotransmitters to promote and maintain mental health as we age. Anxiety, depression, sleep, and many mental related health concerns arise when neurotransmitter levels are inadequate and imbalanced.

These vital chemicals are built from amino acids (breakdown of proteins) and are "manufactured" in the gut. This means digestive health is key to producing adequate levels of these chemicals.
